With John Pozza

John Pozza, of Brookville, is an author, quality early learning advocate, veteran broadcast journalist and WPSU Board member. John is a graduate of West Virginia University in Morgantown and did post graduate study at Drexel University in Philadelphia. He retired in 2020 from the Region 1 Early Learning Resource Center based at the Northwest Institute of Research in Erie, but keeps active as a rotating host of the WPSU Jazz Show. John is also a contributor to the Watershed Books and Literary Arts Center in Brookville, which publishes the Watershed Journal literary magazine. He has authored three books, including “The Summer of ‘66”, when he lived as a young boy with his grandparents in Philly discovering his family’s unique genealogy; “Conversations on The Neighborhood” on the lasting legacy of Fred Rogers; and his memoir, “Was Anybody Really Listening?” His Ask the Expert Quality Early Learning podcast can be heard on the You Tube app.
